

LeRae Collins Named as Director of Communications for Holston Conference Foundation

The Holston Conference Foundation is pleased to announce the hiring of LeRae Collins as the Foundation's first Director of Communications. Recent growth over the past several years warranted the addition of a position to articulate the ministry and services provided by the Foundation to churches, ministries and individuals. LeRae will be a familiar name and face to much of the Holston Conference as she successfully coordinated the Conference's Imagine No Malaria campaign a few years ago.

"I don't think we could have hired a better person for this position and it comes at a critical time," said Paul Bowman, Executive Director. "Her experience in church communications is a great plus and will help the Foundation to no longer be the 'best kept secret' in the Holston Conference as an investment option for churches."

LeRae's has also professionally served United Methodist Communications, the international Imagine No Malaria campaign and as Director of Communications at Church Street UMC and Fountain City UMC.

LeRae is married to Benjamin Collins and they have a daughter, Fallon. They are members of Fountain City United Methodist Church in Knoxville.
